Vespa Primavera 125 Scooter (1967)

The Vespa 125 Primavera, produced in 1967, is a classic scooter that left a lasting impression. The Vespa brand, known for its Italian luxury scooters and mopeds, traces its roots back to 1946 when Piaggio & Co. S.p.A. of Pontedera, Italy, introduced the first Vespa model.

The Vespa 125cc scooter was agile and easy to handle, its design emphasized performance, maneuverability, and with a powerful engine in its class, all qualities that contributed to its success in the 1960's and made it a favourite among riders of that era.

The Vespa 125 Primavera became synonymous with the Vespa name due to its extended production run through the 1970s, '80s, and '90s.

Its timeless design and reliability endeared it to riders across generations and indeed to this day.
